CHOWAN COLLEGE

THE SENIORS'
DREAM

There was a Chowan Senior of 1920, who had a Dream.

In this dream, behold she stood before the old gate of Chowan College, even as it was in the Early Days, as early as 1867. And lo before the gate she saw three Flaming Figures.

"Who are you?" said the Senior.

"We are," they replied, "the Pioneer Virtues which have made Chowan possible."

And the one who had a calm brow and the Eye of a Seer said, "I am Vision."

And the second, who was Full-Armed and of Heroic Mien, said "I am Courage."

And the third, who was of a Tender and Noble countenance, said "I am Loyalty."

Then said the Senior in Great Admiration, "I realize that you have made Chowan possible."

But even as she spoke the figures seemed to cloud into a mist before her eyes. And in a twinkling there stood in their place three Young Girls, dressed in the fashion of Olden Times, even as far back as 1867. And they smiled upon the Senior of 1930, and then turned to enter the Old Gate by the Swinging Door in the middle.

But the Senior said, "Please stop. I feel that you could tell me much about the first days of Our College, for I feel that you possess the three Pioneer Virtues which made it possible, and that you could give me a new understanding and a better love for Old Chowan, since you knew and loved it long before I did."

And they smiled again, and one of them said, "Ask us about it."

And lo the Senior awoke from the Dream.

But she did ask them about it. She found that the three young girls were now three dear Old Ladies. And it was more than a pleasure to talk to them of their College Days, and to glimpse the Intellect and the Spirit that was theirs. It was like being once more in a Dream.

And from this Inspiration it was decided that—

Dedication

With reverence and affection we dedicate this 1930 edition of the CHOWANOKA to the three oldest living graduates of Chowan College—

MRS. T. G. WOOD

who was Dora Askew, of the class of 1867

MRS. T. J. VANN

who was Betty Mitchell, of the class of 1869

MRS. C. W. MITCHELL

who was Pauline Mitchell, of the class of 1869

May we, and those who follow after us, be worthy to follow after them, and may our lives and our influence not fall too far short of theirs in gentleness, and strength, and cheer, in Vision, and Courage, and Loyalty.

MRS. WOOD

I hope that the dear girls of the class of 1930 will never lose their vision of the highest things. It was that which led us to Old Chowan in those far-off Pioneer days. It has never left us. May it never leave these newest alumnae.

Mary A. Wood

MRS. VANN

May the Class of 1930 not only see but have the courage to follow the vision that Chowan College holds before them. That took courage in those earliest days. I am sure it still takes courage.

Mrs. J. F. Vann

MRS. MITCHELL

That the girls of 1930 may be loyal is my wish, that they may stand by their vision, and go on with the start they have made, and that their Alma Mater may stand, and go forward, with them.

Mrs. C. H. Mitchell

The Senior was particularly eager to hear of the Activities these Dear Old Ladies had participated in when at Chowan. She guessed from only a Brief Contact with their sweet and loyal natures that whatever the Form of Said Activities might have Been, they had been entered into with Fervor and carried on with Enthusiasm, that there had been much joy in them. She knew that such things did much to Round Out their lives while Knowledge was being instilled into their Minds. For these lives crowned with years, bespoke wholesomeness and broad sympathies. These were Shining Personalities which gave forth much radiance in their sphere. What were the Pioneer Doings at Old Chowan that had contributed thereto? The Senior wondered just what shape these early Student Activities took, as far back as 1867.

But behold it seemed that the Outstanding Characteristic of the same was that they were Extremely Simple, and that there were very Few of Them. The Senior listened with mingled Astonishment and Amusement, but with a deepening interest to the Descriptions that the Old Ladies gave.

Those far-off Days seemed very strange, dream-like indeed.

But perhaps those Few Pleasures of Olden Times were as much enjoyed as the Many of Today.

PIONEER DOINGS

"Well," said Mrs. Mitchell reminiscently, "we were very young then, when we were at Clowan, and I don't suppose we appreciated it as we should. But we enjoyed it, and loved it, I know that."

"There isn't much to tell," said Mrs. Vann, smiling, "except that we enjoyed our lessons ever so much, and always loved our teachers."

The simplicity of their statements was both amplified and emphasized by Mrs. Wood.

"What did we do? Why, we studied, and had our classes.—No, we didn't have any literary societies then.—No, we didn't have any B. Y. P. U. work. We went to church on Sunday. Yes, sometimes we went downtown other times. There was a drug store, we could get sodas.—Athletics? Oh, no. Not like you have now. What fun did we have? Well, we had our friends, and our folks would send us things from home, things to eat mainly. We always liked that. Wasn't the college food good? Oh, I guess so, but we didn't think so at that time. You know college girls. We were always hungry. Oh, yes, we were always simply perishing. So it was nice to have these feasts in our rooms with our friends, after we got our boxes from home."

"Did we enjoy our friends? Oh, yes, we had good times together, just talking with them and visiting in their rooms. Especially our darlings.—Who were they? Why, our very best friends, the ones we loved the most. What do you call them now? Crushes, you suppose? Well, I don't believe I've heard that word.—What did we do for our darlings? Why, we loved them, and did little things for them, and sometimes we got to sleep with them. That was a treat, of course."

"Yes, indeed, the Brown Lady story happened right while I was in school. Ah, I thought you'd be interested to hear that. Yes, I graduated in the year 1867, and it was that spring term that the girl who later appeared as the Brown Lady died. No, I must not tell her name. But I remember it was bad weather and her family could not come after the body for several days. A little funeral service was held at the college. It was one of President McDowell's (Miss Eunice's father) older daughters who suggested that they dress the girl in her brown dress, just one of her good dresses, so she would look more natural to her mother."

"You say it's all so interesting? But really I haven't told you anything—"

But they were interesting, those Pioneer Doings, just because of their delightful simplicity.

EARLY SCENES

And lo! As the Senior dreamed she realized that the Scene in which the Pioneers of Chowan Carried On their Simple Activities was still unmarred. Improvement had served only to enhance its Traditional Beauty. She realized that we have all they had and our Many Improvements also. The Senior recognized these Antique touches which have given Chowan so much of Charm and Grace. The same Old Trees still stand, and the shrubbery, much of it, remains undisturbed since 1867.

The Grand old Piano and the Rare old Tables which have stood on the Parlor for so long remain in their places. They seem to hold volumes of rich lore in their fine old depths. The Yellow Ivories still ring out true tones, and many new modern designs in silver and pottery grace the Old Tables.

The deep wooded hill with its Majestic Pine and Beech and a quiet little ravine remain untouched by man's hand. The swinging wooden gate still stands guard between the driveway and nature's woods—shutting out, as it were, everything that would change them. And as the Senior walked through the unpretentious gate, she seemed to feel herself in the world of 1867. And she was glad that these scenes had remained Unchanged. The connecting link between these Pioneer Spirits and herself seemed stronger as she realized that their setting was also hers.

Comrades!

And the Senior thought it would be Pleasant that after the three old Ladies had given her this Revelation of the Past, they should Visit Chowan and receive a Revelation of the Present. So the visit was arranged.

And a Revelation it was indeed! It seemed as if the Dream continued, save that the Senior's place was taken by the Oldest Alumna, who, a school girl once more, saw the Three Flaming Figures of the Pioneer Virtues. And she who had a calm brow and the eye of a seer rent aside the Veil of the Years and showed a Glowing Vision of the Chowan of 1930.

The Oldest Alumna was most interested in the Personnel of the College, namely those who Imparted Knowledge and those who sat at their feet, that is to say, the Faculty and the Students.

And the first were noble and strong of heart and head and hand. And they who sat under them were many more than in the Early Days, and were of Varied Interests and Potentialities and Ages.

The youngest of them were Somewhat Tender, and Timid, and, as the world would say, Unsophisticated, but they had a mind to work. And she who called herself Vision was the light unto their eyes and the lamp unto their feet.

The next of those who sat were more Composed and had a mind to fight and to conquer. And upon their shields was emblazoned the emblem of her who called herself Courage.

And again, there were still others who sat and awaited the time of their Attainment. Soberness and Seriousness had been added to their portion. And the influence of the tender and noble-countenanced Loyalty was upon them.

Moreover, the wise ones waxed exceedingly glad as they expounded the learning of the land, for those who sat under them were eager to be filled.

But what the Oldest Alumna remarked above everything was that they All, those who taught and those who learned in this Modern Age, were Comrades. And it was Something delightful to behold the Fellowship and the Understanding between them.

Junior Song

I cannot write a poem;
I cannot sing a song;
But there's one thing I can do all day long;
Praise the Class of '31.

I praise it for its present
I praise it for its past—
Yes, praise it long as breath shall in me last.
Praise the Class of '31.

It is to me a guiding star;
I'll cherish it forever.
Help one, classmates, to spread its fame the world over.
Praise the Class of '31.

Sophomore Class Poem

PAST

We were freshmen all last year
We worked hard and won our goal.
Our parents held us most dear,
As parents did in days of old.

PRESENT

And now we are sophomores
We work hard to do the same.
We see it, hear it, and know
We will always win the game.

FUTURE

Oh, how we long for those days
To show the world what we are,
We'll do our best along life's way,
To spread our fame both near and far.

Freshman Dep

(Tune: "Jingle Bells")

Freshman Class! Freshman Class! always in the lead.
For you see each one of us tries her best to please.
We're never rough, we're never tough.
We're always quite the same.
But nevertheless we must confess we like our Freshman name.

Dear Chowan! Dear Chowan! we pledge our best to you.
For you we'll work with all our might to prove that we are true.
We'll always work, and never shirk.
We'll do the best we can.
And tell the world that dear Chowan is the best school in the land.

Class of '33

We're the class of thirty-three,
And just a wee bit bright you must admit,
Just a lively bunch you see,
And we are very sure to make a hit.
When Chowan Freshman we became
We tried to meet each care with just a grin,
And soon wide-spread became our fame.
But everyone remembers how, at first, she's been,
And

Thanks to our Chowan Mother dear,
We know no other college in the land
Would steer us through our Freshman year
And leave us such a bright and jolly band.
We love our teachers every one,
Although they give us twenty pages at a time,
Everyday we have our little fun,
Which they think sometimes to be quite a crime;

But

We are working, working hard
To some day take the Sophomores' high place,
They'd better hurry, get on guard,
For we're right here to run them quite a race;
Shakespeare says, "a candle small
Sends far into the world its tiny beam,"
And We'll be ready at every call,
However truly verdant we may seem.

And it seemed that the Dream of the Oldest Alumna continued. And Vision showed her the Personnel of the Chowan of 1930, the Faculty and Students who were Comrades, in Action.

But behold there were far more different Activities than in the Pioneer Times when the Oldest Alumna was a Young Girl, for these Young Girls were Enthusiastic Worshippers of the Ideal of All-Around Development.

And they also delighted their souls and whetted their intellects in Verbal Manner through the medium of Debate, and of Exposition, and of Dramatic endeavor. And they were not content with the use of the language of their own native land alone, but exercised their Versatility in the Manipulation of the tongues of other lands.

Nor were they unmindful of the aesthetic. Art, and Music, and all things Beautiful held their proper places in the lives of those who were congregated there.

Even so were they equally active in acquainting themselves with the Wisdom and Joys of things Spiritual, Yes, verily this side of their natures waxed strongest and held sway over the doings of their hands and the workings of their minds. And out of this there grew a System of Government among them. And they all worked Together for the good of the others of them.

As they worked so did they play. The same spirit of Fairness and Coöperation was among them as they strove for the place of prominence on the field of Athletic Combat. It could not be said of them that they were physically unfit.

And they who saw and heard were not ashamed of the accomplishments of their children for frequently did these acquiring ones give to the Press record of their activities. So often as these things were Spread Abroad did those who knew Remark, and advisedly so, upon the Merit of them, as well as upon the merit of those who were the authors thereof.

The Writers' Club

ON THE WAY TO FAME

The Club is without form: it has no officers and no fixed membership, and the attendance varies. Anyone—teacher or student—who will read to the assembled group something which she has written is privileged to attend a meeting. Essays, poems, stories, plays, diaries, autobiographical chapters, letters, editorials, news accounts, and translations from classical and modern languages are presented. The Club intends to encourage voluntary writing and to provide an appreciative audience for those members of the College community who write spontaneously. It does not analyze or criticize except in a very informal way. Members of the Club are not trying to teach each other; they are trying to find out whether they can interest each other.

Among those attending one or more meetings this year are:

Raise a song of exultation,
Alathenians, proudly we
Lift up her royal banner,
Bidding all the world to see,
Alathenians, truth and honor
Alathenians, worth and power,
We, her loyal daughters,
Sing aloud her praise.
Alathenians!

None so true to Alma Mater,
None so quick to heed her call,
Ever Mindful of her welfare,
Loyal daughters one and all.
Alathenians, truth and honor,
Alathenians, worth and power,
So in singing Alma Mater's praise
We hold her memory dear.

The aim of the Sociedad Hispanica is to gain more knowledge of the Spanish language, for saber es poder. When we become discouraged we remember that no hay rosas sin espinas and la constancia hace milagros. So we all look forward to being able some day to speak, read, and write Spanish fluently as a result of our efforts together. Then we will be able to say el fin corona la obra, and to realize more fully the significance of our motto: "El que siembra recoge."

The Athletic Association

The purpose of this Association is to promote intelligent interest in the different sports, including basketball, baseball, tennis, swimming, hiking, and track; to develop physical and mental vigor; and to encourage a spirit of fellowship and good sportsmanship among the students.

The outstanding game in baseball was played Founder's Day. The Junior-Freshman team defeated the Senior-Sophomore team. The Sophomore Class won in the Tennis Tournament that day. On November 26, the College basketball team played Petersburg, Va. Epworth League, and was defeated with a score of 26-19.

And the Oldest Alumna realized that the Scene in which this Modern Personnel of Chowan carried on their Numerous Activities was changed also and Improved. While there was much that was Old and Familiar about College and Campus, there were also New Details, and Modern Touches. Even the grass and the Foliage had a more cultivated look, and out at the Entrance of the Campus, in place of the wooden fence with its wide gates at the side and its Swinging Gate in the Middle was a New Gateway of Concrete Columns surmounted with Electric Lights, while four handsome benches like unto the Gate graced the Campus before the building.

Inside the buildings, moreover, she noted beside much change and addition of Structure, New Furnishings in addition to the Precious Antiques. Rugs, lamps, windows, doors, hangings, pictures,—there was evident here a constant ambitious effort of the part of these New Girls of 1930 to modernize and beautify the classic halls that had grown so dear to them.

And the Oldest Alumna enjoyed the Modern Scenes and hoped that they would become a more and more Worthy Setting for The Faculty and Students who were Comrades, and their Activities.

SEIZING THE TORCH

CLASS
OF 1930

VISION
COURAGE
LOYALTY

THEY WHO CARRY ON

And it seemed that the Dream continued. But the place of the Senior, and that of the oldest Alumna, was taken by a New Personage.

She was the Future's Queen.

This title was hers by right of contest. She had been Voted Chowan's Fairest Girl.

In the Dream that continued, the Future's Queen saw again the Three Pioneer Virtues. And a hand of each clasped, and they all three held extended, a Flaming Torch.

Now the Queen guessed that the Torch represented the Combined Influence of the Three Virtues, or the Meaning of Chowan College. And she asked them if it were not so, and they said it was even so.

Then said she, "You are not carrying the Torch away from us!" And they said, "Not if the Chowan Girls of this Modern Age can Carry it On."

The Queen saw then, as though in answer to a Challenge, a small and slender Figure step forth, a figure which she knew at once to represent the Class of 1930. Now there was Something at once Serious and Gallant and Reverent, at once Inspired and Free and Tender about the Young Figure that the Queen greatly Admired. And she admired even more when she saw her step forward and Seize the Torch that the Three Virtues held out.

And as she did so she said in a Clear Voice, "The Class of 1930 Will Carry On."

Then it seemed that the picture changed and the Queen beheld not the one Young Figure but all the Senior Class of 1930. They passed by in Cap and Gown and the one who marched at their head bore indeed the Torch of the Meaning of Chowan College. And though the Three Pioneer Virtues were absent from the picture as Figures, they were visible as spirits in the Faces which the Torch lighted up.

And the Future's Queen felt a great Pride, for she, too, was a Senior of 1930. She felt like Telling the World, "Behold,—They Who Carry On."

Who can understand this elusive girl? Sometimes she is pessimistic; often she is optimistic, and many times she is complex and contradictory—we never know just what to expect. What is the secret of Noreen's charm? She is individual! She is one of those girls whom we must know thoroughly to appreciate the depth of the character that lies hidden behind the exterior of an indifferent manner.

Her skill with the needle has amazed us all and her talented ability assures us that her life will be one of creation of beauty in needlecraft, and in the making of friends. We remark that she is "unusual" an odd mixture of the real and the mysterious but we admire her, because she lives up to her reputation.

Proctoring is her pet aversion and eating her chief delight. Generosity and sympathy describe her exactly. "Sookie" can easily be recognized as a Senior. She has gained all that dignity and poise that one seeks so eagerly as most desirable requisites for completion of a college career. She is reserved, sincere, and apparently indifferent. These qualities are further enhanced by the charm of a quaint air of daintiness which is peculiar to "Sookie" alone. She radiates good cheer and love and she is congenial with all who know her well. She is a solid combination of beauty and virtue which makes her a genuine girl.

Her sparkling brown eyes, winning smile, and attractive figure go far in helping her glowing bright hair to win for her numerous friends, especially of the opposite sex. In fact, Mildred, probably known to some as "Red," is very much of another Clara Bow, except, of course, she isn't in the movies. THEIR

THEIR LEGACY

And in the Dream which continued for the Future's Queen, things became rapidly more Familiar, so that she seemed to be Half-Awake at times, and remembering rather than Dreaming.

For she saw one of her class-mates who was most Well-Known to her, seated at a table and covering various sheets of Foolscap with writing. And looking over the shoulder of her who wrote, the Queen caught glimpses of such magic words as "Lawn Party," "Stunt Night," "Brown Lady," "Endowment Pledges," "Junior-Senior Banquet," "Caste," and many others. And the Queen said, "Oh, yes, you are writing the Record of the Class of 1930." And she fell into a reverie, a Kind of Dream within a Dream, in which all of the events of the past Four Years passed before her, and lo they had, both great and small, that Charm which belongs only to College Days. And the Queen thought, again with Pride. "It is a Good Story. We have well and truly Carried On."

Moreover it seemed that she saw then another classmate, also a Dear Friend, who bent over a shining Crystal Ball. And the Queen said, "What do you see, O Class Prophetess, in the Crystal?" Then replied she who gazed therein, "I see a glimpse of the Future of each of our classmates." "And how seems it to you?" asked the Queen. "It seems very Fair," was the reply, "All seem to have taken up Novel Occupations in the World of the Future. Yet I can see how each is Well Founded on the activities and Possibilities each girl displayed while at Chowan." "I see," said the Queen, "Still Pioneers, and still Carrying On."

Now did the Queen Recall that she herself was the Class Testator, and she found herself looking into a Treasure Chest, containing those precious things which the Class of 1930 will leave to Old Chowan. "There is not much of Material Value," thought she, "But better, there are the jewels of Vision, Courage, and Loyalty in the unique setting of 26 Examples in young Lives and Personalities. And every Jewel glows with the light of the Torch."

Senior Class Poem

Classmates we have worked together four long years with eager minds.
We have had along our pathway pleasures, too, of many kinds.

Vision, brave alumnae granted—gave to us the torch to bear,
Loyalty and Courage taught us. We have kept their honor fair.

Through all years, O Alma Mater, we'll remember thy sweet name.
How our loving hearts rejoice at the mention of thy fame!

We have held the flag of Courage four years long o'er Columbus white
And are striving still to bear it in our struggle for the right.

We shall seek, O Chowan College, to be worthy of your care
For you taught us eager learners highest standards to prepare.

We shall strive as you have taught us to be always for the right
We will ever, Chowan College, cheer thy colors blue and white.

Chronicle of the Class of '30

SEPTEMBER 1926—THE BEGINNING—THELMA FREEMAN, PRESIDENT

Our first year—characterized by our greenness and daring—"Fools step in where angels fear to tread." So it seemed this year, when thirty-one of us attempted more things, and accomplished more, than in any of our last three years. A summary will give only a slight idea of what happened.

1. September 18—Our courage was first tested in the Society initiations, and our Loyalty was pledged, for the first time, to our College.
2. September 26—We pledged our loyalty to God in a beautiful and impressive Y. W. A. Initiation Service.
3. Beginning Wednesday, September 29, the Clan Sophomore held sway. The Week of Tyranny included midnight court, a stunt program by the "Rats," a circus parade downtown, and last, but not the least exciting, the night in which fourteen freshmen held the fort, until daybreak, in one room against the mighty host of Sophomores. Another court followed the morning after.
4. Wednesday night, October 27, 12 o'clock, was the memorable night of the return of the Spirit of the Brown Lady, and subsequent ramblings of freshmen with the spirits of another world, at which time we again pledged our loyalty and devotion to Dear Chowan.
5. Our first Amateur Night, October 29, brought us honors—first place among class stunts, which we held for three successive years.
6. December 9 our first P-nut Week began.
7. In this year twenty-one of our class made pledges to the Endowment Campaign.
8. We caught a Vision of the work ahead of us and developed Courage to face the issues as we met them day by day. We were inspired by our association with teachers and classmates, and vowed eternal allegiance to our school and to the Future which lay ahead of us.

1927-28—SECOND YEAR TRIUMPHS—JUANITA VICK, PRESIDENT

1. We returned to school in the fall of this year, minus thirteen of our classmates, but with a vigor and vim that bespoke sorrow to the incoming freshmen. However, our Reign of Terror was slightly modified by a more pressing interest—a lawn party, by which we realized a needed sum wherewith to entertain our sisters.
2. Our Hallowe'en Carnival was the grand fete of the year, at which time we demonstrated our executive ability as well as our spirit of fun.
3. In this year we aided our sisters, the Seniors, in their graduating finals by carrying the daisy chain and lifting our melodious voices in appreciative song.
4. Our athletic prowess was displayed in the Sophomore-Senior Baseball Game when we were finally run by nightfall—with a score far ahead of our rivals.

1928-29—THE YEAR OF MOST ENJOYMENT—EVA HOGGARD, PRESIDENT

1. Our lucky year—The B. S. U. Conference. We came to the front through our service in the Junior Tea Room. Our reputation as cooks grew steadily with our bank account.
2. The most enjoyable program of the year was presented by the Junior Class—so others said—when Pink and Patches and Suppressed Desires were given by an all-star cast. The Juniors were assisted by Mr. Mark J. Benyunes, who gave a violin concert.

6. The climax of this year was the Junior-Senior banquet. We ushered out the Seniors with all good will, not forgetting to imagine ourselves in their places the following year.
7. In this year we began to realize the mighty work, which the teaching and inspiration of Chowan had pointed out to us, that lay within our power to contribute to the world around us. Our aims were raised and our field of endeavor and ambitions broadened, until we could see only the needs of others and not those of our own.

1929-30—SENIOR SUPREMACY—JUANITA VICK, PRESIDENT

1. We have held the reins this year, serving as examples of good conduct. A Senior Honor Roll was established and an average of 90 per cent on roll was made on it.
2. October 31—Our Big Night—A "weinie roast" was given by our sponsor, Miss Carroll. The events of that night will long be remembered by the members of the class of '30.
3. The Seniors presented the classical play, Caste, in which new talent was disclosed and met with such success it was carried to two well-known towns where it received much commendation.
4. As this annual goes to press, we are anticipating many happy hours—parties, picnics, plays, recitals, concerts—the least among these not being the Wake Forest Glee Club Concert, but the greatest certainly being The Thrills of Commencement.

Class Prophecy---a Glimpse Into 1940

Yes, they were all there. When I had written them, they had all seemed enthusiastic about the idea of a reunion of the Class of 1930. And, indeed, not one was missing. A chorus of cheers greeted me and for a while, we all talked at once about how glad we were to be together again. But it was late, and so, rapping on the table, I called the meeting to order.

"Members of the Class of 1930," I said, "As I stand before you on this happy occasion of our Class reunion, I thrill with pride and pleasure, for we have all noted, with keen interest, the progress which has been made in our Alma Mater within the last ten years. Ten years seems such a short time when old friends meet together and go over, in thoughts and memories, their yesterdays. How happy we are to find that the Chowan girls of 1940 are able to claim the same president and the same college mother that we claimed.

Everyone is going to tell you, in her turn, what the past ten years have done for her."

"Well, girls," said Lela Ashley, as petite and dashing as ever, "I guess I'm first. Of course you know I'm married. What you'll be more interested in is that I'm venturing into the perfectly new field of using my spare time to collect antique dance records. Since the Victrola is clear out of date, they are of rare value as curiosities. I have a barn stored with them,—a collection valued at a half million dollars."

Norene Baker, in her sophisticated manner, continued the conversation. "I have been writing, French menus for the past four years for all the leading hotels in the North. Montaine Ward is my field secretary, and because of her ability to translate French so well, has interested many patrons in my menus."

"I can speak for three of us," Mary Britton remarked, looking over the group, "Julia Downs, Pauline Simons, and I are about to venture into an entirely new field of science—the planet, Jupiter. Pauline has cleverly designed modern scientific outfits for our first trip up there."

"Yes," said Pauline, "They include very cute white sweaters of synthetic wool with a big J. on them."

Lucille Davis arose with that air of calm dignity, which is so characteristic of her. "You, who are interested in North Carolina politics, know what the last ten years have done for Maybelle Honeycutt and me. Maybelle is making her plans to run for Lieutenant Governor and I for Governor of North Carolina. This is real pioneering, for it is an unheard of thing in the old North State."

"Girls," said Frances Flythe, her blonde hair elegantly coiffed as usual, and with her breezy seriousness, "I'm a real pioneer, too. For five years I have been on the Concert stage giving a new kind of program. I sing numbers imitating the sound of vegetables growing in the ground, and rosebuds opening in the breeze. At last a real nature music has been evolved."

"Most of you know that Mildred Hinton and I are co-editors of the News and Observer," Thelma Freeman said, "But the success of our paper is due, in a large measure, to Jessie Helen Belch, Juanita Vick, and Willia. They, too, have found their spheres in journalism. Thanks to Miss Carroll's inspiration, we are the first lady editors in the South."

"When I was elected president of the National Association of Psychiatrists," Eva Hoggard remarked, "I was surprised and delighted that three of my co-workers were former classmates of mine—Eva Vinson, Irene Sykes, and Olivia Williams. Through combining psychology with our treatments, we are attaining unprecedented success in this comparatively new field."

"Walter and I have been married six years," Audrey Parker said. "We are living in Norfolk at present. I have been writing articles in my spare time on "How to keep a family happy on three meals a week instead of three a day." I believe I am the first to think that even a possibility. I think my experience in the Chowan dining room first gave me the idea."

Then Isla Poole arose. She seemed even more sophisticated and insouciant and charming than ever. "Girls," she remarked, carelessly, "I have had a checkered and romantic career but, as you may have heard, it has been devoted largely to literary pursuits. I have had some success, but my next book will create a real furor. It will tell, in novel form, of some psychological research I have been doing to perfect a system of mental telepathy, whereby a teacher can know what is in the mind of a student without it's being necessary for the latter to recite or write examination papers. This system will be useful also between friends who do not express themselves or write letters easily. Needless to say, this book will be my chef d'oeuvre and will require all the knowledge of education, language, science, and human nature that I acquired at Chowan and in the world since."

"After several years of experimenting," Emma Gay Stevenson remarked, briefly, "My co-laborer, Mildred Pipkin, and I have evolved a mechanism by which we can project on a screen the colors of notes produced by the violin and piano."

Nellie Sutton, rising in a business-like way, favored the class with an explanation of her new automatic typewriter. "Even a child can learn to type perfectly with only three lessons on my machine. It's a time saver and its accuracy is unquestionable."

"Well," said I, "Tomorrow, I shall go back to Richmond and take up my work in Grace Hospital, but I want to thank you for the happy time you've given me. This has been highly interesting, I'm sure, and shows that the members of the Class of 1930 are not only loyal to their Alma Mater and her ideals but have also the Vision and Courage to enter new fields of endeavor in the world, and be pioneers in this modern day, as Chowan was in olden times."

Now it seemed to the Future's Queen after beholding Them Who Seized The Torch, and Carried On, and the Way in which they Carried On, that in her Dream everything became very Quiet. She dreamed that she stood before that noble Building, the Columns, and that she looked at it long, and then turned to look at the lovely campus that lay in front. And she was quite alone and she thought, "What now?"

"What does the Future hold?"

"We the Class of 1930 have carried on the Torch. What lies ahead for Chowan, and for us?"

And the vista of the Campus before her seemed to grow more beautiful and bright, though it kept still its Dear Familiar look, and over it among the Treetops flamed words: The Future—The Land of Still Greater Achievement—and again, The Future!

"Of Course," thought the Queen, "Other classes will Carry On as we have done. Chowan's Future cannot but be Greater than the Past or the Present."

"But what of us?"

For a moment nothing happened. Then it seemed unaccountably all at once, as if she were looking into a Mirror. And she saw, of course, Herself.

"I see," said the Queen. "Our Future is Up to Us. Chowan has done what she could for us. She has Imparted to us Vision, Courage, and Loyalty. She has given us the Torch."

But a last thought came to her.

"Are we not, too, a part of Chowan's Future? For we are her Newest Alumnae?"

The Queen was right. She was the Future's Queen.

The following jokes are the favorites of the Seniors and their reasons for liking them are given.

—SPONSOR'S NOTE.

A young lady went into a book store and asked the clerk for some light summer reading.

"Well," said the clerk, "We have a good book here called The Kentucky Cardinal."

"No, I don't care anything about religious subjects," was the reply.

"Oh, but," said the clerk, "This cardinal was a bird!"

"I don't care anything about his private life either," rejoined the young lady curtly.

I think this is a good joke because it is Miss Whitney's favorite, and yet she is interested in both religious subjects, and private lives.

A boy and girl were engaged to be married. About a week before they were supposed to get married, both of them died. When they got to the Golden Gate, they told St. Peter that they wished to be married. He told them to go on in and he would see that they were married.

About a year later, they went to see St. Peter. They told him that they wanted to get married and that they were tired of waiting. This is the reply that St. Peter made:

"You may get married just as soon as a preacher gets to Heaven. I have been waiting for one a whole year, and not one has come to Heaven yet."

I like this joke because it is satire on the goodness of preachers, and how I enjoy satire!

BUILDERS DREAMS

VISIONS created by the imagination precede the achievement of any really great accomplishment. The ability to weave the threads of imagination into the finished fabric is equally important.

It has been the privilege of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY to interpret the ideas of the Staff and create in material form their vision.

From the art work and engravings to the finished book, this volume is the result of organized cooperation with the Staff.

Such able cooperation is one of the "visions" which precede the building of a successful business, and is a part of the working policy of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY.

To those Staffs desiring complete cooperation from art work and engravings to the finished book, we offer undivided service. Complete service means undivided responsibility as to the result—one organization to correspond and talk with—one trained director to merge the many ingredients into the finished product.

You, too, may be proud of your annual.
